Some medical questions lie outside the industry focus despite being of high importance to society. To fill this gap, the SNSF has been running the special programme for high-quality Investigator Initiated Clinical Trials (IICT) since 2016. They test the quality and efficiency of various therapies.

In 2021, the public will have a say in selecting the projects for the first time. Therefore we are looking for a lay person as a representative of patients and the public on the IICT evaluation panel

As of 1 December 2020 or by arrangement

In this role, you will help bring medical research more closely into line with the needs of patients and of the public at large.

Your duties (time commitment)

- Contributing to the definition of evaluation criteria (approximately 2 half days in December 2020 / January 2021)
- Participating in the evaluation of clinical studies (15 to 20 applications per year between February and April)
- Participating in evaluation meetings (2 days per year in early May)
- Overall time commitment: approximately 100 hours per year

Your profile

- Interested in medical topics
- Very good English, both spoken and written

We offer

- Training and mentoring on different aspects of evaluation
- Playing a part in the evaluation of clinical research projects
- Compensation of 250 francs per half day (meeting preparation and attendance) and coverage of expenses (travel, food and accommodation)
